

Web untangles the worry of weddings

TODAY'S women simply don't have the time or the money to meticulously plan every detail of their own wedding day, according to research by businesswoman Nicola Nelson.

Now help is at hand thanks to the arrival of mrs2be.com a people-friendly website designed by Nicky that gives every first time wedding planner access to a wealth of experience and information to enable them to arrange the perfect ceremony.

And mrs2be.com goes even further by giving the 21st century bride her own wedding website, a high tech wedding guest programme that takes all the hard work out of inviting friends and family a clever wedding gift planner to make life simpler all round and a budgeting tool to keep spending on track.

'This is an information resource aimed at making wedding planning a more manageable and enjoyable task,' said Nicola from her Chester office. 'mrs2be.com is based on the understanding that modern women really don't have time on their hands and need all the help they can get.'

'We also understand that today's couples don't have money to burn so we have made membership of mrs2be.com as affordable as possible - in fact the first year's membership is just £5 per month.

In return for that they get their website and guest and gift list service plus access to an ever changing selection of relevant articles, advice and information that will help them plan their wedding and a steady flow of member discounts and offers.

'We also feature a selection of advertisers offering an eclectic mix of quality products and services from wedding gown specialists to personal trainers and from hotels to wedding venues.'

'Furthermore, mrs2be is not a franchised wedding website. We are based in the North with offices in Chester and Wrexham - ideal for brides-to-be anywhere in the North and North Wales.'

Nicola, a 37-years-old mother of three from Wrexham, came up with the idea of mrs2be while running her own website marketing company.

'It dawned on me that new technology could provide a real forum for information and advice for brides-to-be and I set to work on the project. Six months ago mrs2be.com was launched and we already have five hundred members from across the country.'

'Now I can't wait to be invited to some of the weddings my site has helped organise!'
